Holy Bistro

Sathorn, Bangkok — Marketing & Growth Plan

prepared for internal review : Naing

Merged 22 Sep 2026: Suji's operational plan (business snapshot, segments, upsell, KPIs, 90-day roadmap, budget) combined with the Holy Group content-agent pipeline (voice, calendar, compliance rails).

Positioning

Holy Bistro is the social heart of the Holy building — the place every guest ends up, whether they started at the hostel, the dispensary, or walked in off the street. Two things make that true: it's the only place in the building open past midnight, and it's warm, unpretentious comfort food rather than fine-dining pretension.

- Brand personality: relaxed, a little irreverent, always worth trying
- Tone: playful & bold, English primary — food and drink information stays clear and simple even when the surrounding copy is playful
- Tagline directions: "Dinner, drinks, and a cozy place — all without leaving the building" for the in-building/captive-audience angle; "Sathorn's kitchens are dark. Ours isn't." for the outside nightlife crowd

Target segments

- Hostel guests — highest-frequency, lowest-effort to convert; already on-site
- Dispensary visitors — deciding what's next right after the counter; a natural, low-pressure moment to suggest the rooftop
- Outside nightlife crowd — the only segment worth direct marketing spend, since the other three are already captive
- Group & private-event bookers — underused, high-margin

Buying triggers: word-of-mouth on the food, physical proximity for in-building guests. Hesitation: unclear combo pricing, uncertainty whether it's open or worth the trip, no reason to visit on a random weeknight. What brings them back: a recurring night worth planning around, a bundle that feels like value, a natural handoff from hostel or dispensary staff.

What's working, what's leaking

Working	Leaking
Comfort-food reputation, described warmly in reviews	No bundle menu — food and drinks priced/sold separately
Captive built-in audience from hostel + dispensary	Thin weekday traffic outside scheduled events
	Private & group bookings have no packaged offer

Stop	Start	Continue
Pricing food/drinks as unrelated line items	A simple combo menu (small plate + drink) at a clear bundle price	Making the room feel alive; clear menu, strong Grab presence
Treating weekday nights as automatically slow	One recurring, plannable weekly special	Leaning into home-style comfort food
Letting hostel/dispensary guests discover the bistro by accident	A one-line staff handoff from check-in and the dispensary counter	Building word-of-mouth off an already-strong review base

Content & channel strategy

- Channels: Instagram, Facebook, TikTok, LINE OA, plus Grab/LINE MAN as a delivery-side channel
- Cadence: roughly one event/late-night teaser, one food/drink highlight, and one behind-the-scenes or guest moment per week

- Lead content pillar: the late-night draw (open till 1am, six nights a week) — the hardest-to-copy claim in Sathorn
- Secondary pillars: food/drink features, guest moments, the weekly recurring special, group/private-event packages
- User-generated content: repost guest photos/videos (with permission)
- Reviews: ask naturally at the end of a meal/event; reply to every review; feeds Google Business Profile visibility

Menu & upsell

- Food + drink combo at a clear bundle price — the single fastest lift to average check
- Table-side upsell prompts (“add a salad / a second drink”), suggested naturally
- Group & private-event package: set menu, reserved section, minimum spend

Staff scripts

Moment	Line
Taking a first drink order	“If you’re not in a rush, the [combo name] is a good way to try a bit of everything.”
Mid-meal, table settled in	“Want me to bring round two, or are you saving room for appetizers?”
Guest mentions a birthday/group occasion	“We do a set package for groups if you want the whole table sorted — I can walk you through it.”
End of meal, regular guest	“Good to see you back — you’re close to your next loyalty reward, by the way.”

Cross-promotion & loyalty

A one-line handoff at hostel check-in and the dispensary counter (“the bistro’s open till late if you want to relax after”) is the cheapest acquisition channel in the building. Bistro visits count toward the shared Holy Group loyalty program.

KPIs to track monthly

Metric	Why it matters	How to calculate
Average check per table	Tracks whether bundling/upsell is working	Food & drink revenue ÷ tables served
Weekday vs. weekend split	Flags whether the weekly event fills the gap	Revenue Mon–Thu ÷ Fri–Sun, monthly
Cross-referral rate	Hostel/dispensary → bistro conversion	Loyalty-tracked bistro visits from hostel/dispensary guests ÷ total hostel/dispensary guests
Group/private booking count	Progress on an underused, high-margin line	Bookings per month
Review velocity & rating	Local search ranking, new-guest trust	New reviews/month; rolling average rating
Repeat-guest rate	Loyalty/event-reminder effectiveness	Returning guests ÷ total guests, monthly

90-day rollout

Days 1–30: Launch the bundle menu; agree the cross-referral handoff scripts with hostel/dispensary staff; start a consistent, non-incentivized review ask; get the Google Business Profile live; start posting from the content calendar.

Days 31–60: Launch the signature weekly night; publish the group/private booking package; join the shared QR/LINE loyalty account.

Days 61–90: Add a premium event-night menu tier; pair a loyalty milestone with a rooftop/dispensary-adjacent perk; first KPI review.

Budget guidance

Budget	Where it goes
0 THB	Staff scripts, manual review requests, GBP upkeep, reposting guest content
5,000 THB/mo	Boosted posts for the weekly event, table signage for the combo menu, milestone-reward stock
10,000 THB/mo	+ regular photo/video shoot for social, shared loyalty/CRM platform
15,000+ THB/mo	+ recurring guest DJ, professional photography, paid push on the group/private-event package

Figures on average check, weekday traffic, and guest behavior are hypotheses from Suji's research, not internal POS data — confirm against actual sales and booking records before committing budget.
