Holy Group Marketing Plan

Sathorn, Bangkok — Ecosystem Strategy & Content Pipeline

prepared for internal review : Naing

Holyweed is licensed and has passed inspection

Confirmed by the owner, 22 Sep 2026: Holyweed holds the documentation required under the 2026 framework, officials have inspected, and the shop passed. Earlier drafts of this plan treated the dispensary as a compliance problem. That framing was wrong and has been removed.

Context for why it matters: the April 2026 Ministerial Regulation moved cannabis flower to a medical framework and requires an underlying credential (hospital, herbal product, pharmaceutical, folk-healer, or licensed cultivator). A law-firm summary put it plainly — "the pure retail dispensary model without one of these underlying credentials is no longer a viable applicant profile." Licensed premises must also keep trained staff on site during opening hours and run effective odour and smoke elimination.

So a shakeout is underway, and Holyweed is on the surviving side of it.

The one question still open

A licence to operate and a permission to advertise are normally separate regimes — Thailand is strict about this in adjacent categories (licensed bars cannot freely advertise alcohol; licensed pharmacies cannot freely advertise prescription medicines). The April regulation itself defers marketing to "the Notifications issued under Sections 44 and 45" plus general consumer-protection and advertising law.

Passing inspection settles whether Holyweed may sell. It does not automatically settle what may be said publicly, on international platforms.

Narrow question for whoever handled the licensing: we are licensed — what may we say publicly, and on which channels? Five minutes of their time replaces all the secondary-source guesswork below. Now also worth asking explicitly: does that answer cover Holy Hostel referencing 420-friendliness in its own marketing (decided below), or is that a separate question?

The strategic reframe: sell legitimacy, not cannabis

The target segment is cannabis tourists. The instinct is to signal cannabis — "420-friendly", "on-site dispensary". There is a stronger hook available for Holyweed itself.

A traveller buying cannabis in Bangkok in late 2026 is anxious about two things: buying somewhere dodgy, and turning up to find the shop closed. The rules changed this year and shops are disappearing.

"Licensed, inspected, passed, trained staff on site, lab-tested, still open" answers that anxiety directly — and it is a claim about the business being legitimate, which is categorically different from promoting cannabis. It is also a claim most competitors cannot make truthfully, and it gets stronger every month as unlicensed shops close.

Holy Hostel's own marketing is a different case: it's not the licensed business, and the owner has chosen to keep 420-friendly language there directly. That's a deliberate exception to "sell legitimacy, not cannabis," not an extension of it — Holyweed itself still sells legitimacy; Holy Hostel sells the stay, and is allowed to say who the stay is for.

Voice, focus and channel — decided 22 Sep

	Decision
Brand tone (all three)	Playful & bold — high-energy, a bit cheeky, leans into the 420/late-night identity where the brand can legally do so
Language	English primary
Holy Bistro's content pillar	The late-night draw — "open till 1am" is the main hook
Holyweed LINE OA	Confirmed live and age-verified
Holy Hostel's own copy	Keeps 420-friendly / cannabis-tourist language

One nuance on tone vs. Holyweed: “playful & bold, leans into 420” is the house voice for Bistro and Hostel, who are free to use it. For Holyweed itself, the voice can still be playful in wording, but every draft still has to clear the `holyweed-content-check` skill first — a bold tone doesn’t loosen what’s legally sayable.

Unified loyalty

One QR/LINE loyalty account, usable across Holyweed, Holy Bistro and Holy Hostel, tracking visits and spend across all three.

- Milestone rewards, not blanket discounts — a small perk at visit 5, a bigger one at visit 10, rather than a standing “buy 3 get 2” style deal
- Cross-referral rate becomes measurable — loyalty-tracked visits touching 2+ businesses ÷ total visits
- One-line staff handoffs feed it — hostel check-in → bistro/dispensary, dispensary checkout → rooftop, bistro table → rooftop
- Rollout: join the shared QR/LINE loyalty account across all three businesses in the first 60 days

Three businesses, three positions

	Position	Channels	Automation
Holy Bistro	Unrestricted	IG, FB, TikTok, LINE OA, Grab, LINE MAN	Full — auto-publish on calendar
Holy Hostel	Unrestricted (own copy keeps 420-friendly language)	IG, FB, TikTok, Google Business Profile, booking sites	Full — auto-publish on calendar
Holyweed	Licensed; advertising scope pending the lawyer’s answer	LINE OA (opt-in, age-verified — live now), Google Business Profile, SEO, reviews	Full, to those channels; widen if the lawyer says it’s allowed

Safety rails on the auto-publish path

- The `holyweed-content-check` skill runs on every dispensary draft before it reaches any channel
- Brand isolation — the Holyweed agent holds no credentials for the Bistro or Hostel accounts, and vice versa
- A kill switch — one instruction pauses all scheduled publishing

The content pipeline

1. Strategy — turns brand context and available signals into a prioritised 30-day brief per brand
2. Calendar — turns the brief into a dated posting plan per brand per channel
3. Creative — turns a calendar entry into a Canva design brief and platform-fitted caption, using each brand’s voice (Canva connector: connected)
4. Approval — one gate on the month’s plan
5. Publish — Metricool (connected) schedules to Instagram, Facebook, TikTok and Google Business Profile. LINE OA broadcasts still need a separate route.

Where the leverage actually is

1. Holy Bistro has no search presence at all. No Google Business Profile, no Tripadvisor entry, nothing in the Sathorn Italian round-ups. Largest unclaimed lever.
2. Holy Hostel has two reviews. 8.1/10 from a sample of two. OTA sort order runs on volume and recency, so the property is invisible regardless of quality.
3. Agoda carries several duplicate listings — “Entire apartment”, “Entire house”, plus a bare listing, and Airbnb has “Holy Hostel Spacious Pods” separately. Duplicates split reviews.

Social posting is fourth on this list, not first.

Still open

- The lawyer’s answer on what Holyweed may say publicly and on which channels
- Bistro’s search presence and Hostel’s review count — still the two biggest unclaimed levers
- Consolidating Agoda’s duplicate Holy Hostel listings
- Picking one shared loyalty/CRM platform

This plan combines the owner’s licensing confirmation, the content-agent pipeline design, and the per-brand operational plans (Holy Bistro, Holy Hostel, Holyweed Dispensary) into one ecosystem-level view.
